

GREGG TURNBULL

Gregg Turnbull leads the web services and engagement for Larimer County, Colorado. He and his team have won multiple awards for web engagement including NAGW Pinnacle awards in 2018 and 2019, and GovTech's Government Experience Awards in 2018 and 2019. His focus (and speaker outings) have been on government innovation and citizen engagement - such as the use of data-driven stories, making the most of service channels, leveraging the cloud, and the pain and gain of a site relaunch. Before working for local government, he led the web and software development efforts for the world renowned Biodesign Institute at Arizona State University. Gregg is a Certified Government Digital Service Professional (CGDSP) and more recently a Certified Government Chief Information Officer (CGCIO) - both designations awarded through Public Technology Institute(pti.org) and Rutgers University. Gregg also serves on the board of The National Association of Web Professionals (nagw.org).
